

Whenever, Wherever

In Michigan, you can breastfeed your child wherever you are. No one can require you to cover up, leave, or use another room, such as the bathroom, to feed your child.

Michigan law says that “public nudity laws do not apply to a woman breastfeeding a child.”

Breastfeeding + Working

Section 7 of the Affordable Care Act, the Fair Labor Standards Act (FLSA), was amended to require employers to provide “reasonable break time for an employee to express breast milk for her nursing child for 1 year after the child’s birth each time such employee has need to express the milk.”

Employers are also required to provide “a place, other than a bathroom, that is shielded from view and free from intrusion from coworkers and the public, which may be used by an employee to express milk.”

What types of employers are covered by the law?

All such employers are subject to the FLSA break time requirement unless they have fewer than 50 employees and can demonstrate that compliance with the provision would impose an undue hardship.

Does the break time have to be paid break time?

Employers are not required under the FLSA to compensate nursing mothers for breaks taken to express milk. However, where employers already provide paid breaks, an employee who uses that break time to express milk must be paid in the same way that other employees are paid.

Do employers need to create a permanent, dedicated space for use by nursing employees?

No, a space temporarily created or converted into a space for expressing milk or made available when needed by the nursing mother is sufficient provided that the space is shielded from view and free from any intrusion.

If the only space available at a work site is a bathroom, can employers require employees to express breast milk there?

No, the statute specifically states that the space provided for employees to express breast milk cannot be a bathroom.
